

Talks at the Fireplace

in Gahro / Germany
September 16-19, 2011

Program

Supported by Biocodex

Many of the intriguing beginnings remain unaccomplished because of the unreliable funding policies, the lack of instruments or laboratory capacities, and the shortage of personal time. Even when all this has been accomplished, reviewers and editors may deny publication of many spunky thoughts and decisive data, leaving them unknown to the general audience. The burden of unrealized visions and excommunicated facts grow with the life time of the researcher.

The "talks at the fireplace" are meant to review our own scientific research and to give us an opportunity to articulate the unsaid in the inner circle of comrades in science.

Arrival 15-16. September

Friday, the 16 of September

Visit of the medieval city of Luckau,
Walking in the woods, collecting mushrooms, sculpturing, painting, etc.

Saturday, the 17 of September

- 9.00-11.00 Alexander Swidsinski Charite Universitätsmedizin / Germany
 "Tracking microbiota within the human body"
- 11.00-13.00 Joel Dore INRA institut de recherche agronomique en Europe / France
 "Splitting of the infinity"
- 13.00-15.00 Baking Bread
- 15.00-17.00 Hermie Harmsen Groningen University / Netherlands
 "Structuring of the vast" Was ist vast?
- 17.00- 19.00 Willem de Vos Wageningen University / Netherlands
 "Pursuing microbiota where they are not expected to be"

Sunday, the 18 of September

- 9.00-11.00 Herbert VanKrunningen University of Connecticut / USA
 "Bacteria, viruses, fungi - the polyinfectious origin of mucosal disease"
- 11.00- 13.00 Sandra Macfarlane University of Dundee / UK
 "Metabolic ecology of the intestine"
- 13.00-15.00 Pig Roast
- 15.00- 17.00 Mario Vanechoutte Ghent University / Belgium
 "Identifying pathogens which nobody wants to know about"
- 17.00- 19.00 Rudolf Amann Max Planck Institut für Marine Mikrobiologie / Germany
 "Past, present and future incites"

Monday, the 19 of September

Walking around history, visit of Slawenburg Raddusch or boat ride